To Our New Members— Coming to the first meeting is the hardest, but you have nothing to lose and everything to gain! Try not to judge your first meeting as to whether or not the Bereaved Parent's / USA will work for you. At the next meeting you may find just the right person or just the right words said that will help you in your grief work.

To Our Members Who are Further Down the "Grief Road"— We need your encouragement and support. Each meeting we have new parents. THINK BACK— what would it have been like for you at your first meeting if there had not been any Bereaved Parent "Veterans" to welcome you, share your grief, encourage you and tell you "your pain will not always be this bad; it really does get better!"

DO IT YOUR WAY

Mary Cleckley, Atlanta, GA

I think it's only fair to tell you – there is no Bereaved Parent of the Month award, nor an award for the one with the stiffest upper lip. In fact, what you will find if you try to be the most stoic, brave and strong, the one doing too well, is instead of a reward, you suffer the consequences. It is not possible to lose someone as vital as one's child and not have the pain or deep grief.

You will find a great many non-bereaved people will encourage you to play the old "if you'll pretend you're okay and it's really not so bad, we'll let you come play with us, but if you're going to cry and talk about your dead child, then you can't play the game."

This is one time in your life you don't have to meet anybody else's standards. There is nothing more unique about you than the way you express your grief – and you have that right, however it is manifested. A great deal of how you go about it is determined by how you have handled previous problems. So, if someone tries to influence you to play the old game of rewarding you with attention because "you are doing well," tell you you're not doing well, that your child has died and you're hurting (still)...Let them know it doesn't help you to pretend everything is okay. Do whatever it is you need to do to survive this trauma, and don't worry about whether it pleases or displeases other people. Just Do It Your Way.

WHEN MEMORIES HURT

By Mego Lien
Ladies Home Journal, December 2007 Issue

Why is it so easy to forget where you've left your keys every morning yet so hard to shake the embarrassing memory of flubbing you lines in the second-grade play? Strong emotion undermines our ability to forget, even when we went to, according to a new study from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. The embarrassment—or sadness, glee or any strong emotion—that was part and parcel of the experience causes our brains to forge connections that something mundane, such as being told a phone number, does not, explains Keith Payne, Ph.D., study author and assistant professor of psychology there. “These memories become more ingrained precisely because they have this emotional aspect.” But even unshakable dark memories have a bright side: Remembering bad experiences helps you avoid their recurrence.

How Long Will This Pain Last?

“How long will this pain last?” a broken-hearted parent asked me. “All the rest of your life.” I had to answer truthfully. We never quite forget. No matter how many years go by, we remember. The loss of a child is like a major operation, part of us is removed and we have a scar for the rest of our lives. This does not mean the pain continues at the same intensity. There is a short while at first when we hardly believe it; it is rather like we have a cut our hand, we see the blood flowing, but the pain has not set in yet. So when we are bereaved there is a short while before the pain hits us. But when it does, it is massive in its affect. Grief is shattering.

Then the wound begins to heal It is like going through a dark tunnel. Occasionally we glimpse a bit of light up ahead, then lose sight of it awhile, then see it again and one day merge into the lights. Then, eventually, we are able to laugh, to care, to love. The wound is healed, so to speak, the stitches are taken out, and we are whole again; but not quite. The scar is still there and so is the scar tissue. As the years go by, we manage. There are things to do, people to care for, our living children, tasks that call for our full attention. But the pain is still there, not far below the surface. We see a face that looks like our son/daughter, hear a voice that echoes, see a photo in someone's album, see children playing in the school yard, boys playing football, girls looking pretty, and it is as though the knife were in the wound again. But not so painfully, and mixed with joy too. Because remembering a happy time is not all sorrow; it brings back happiness with it.

To My Son Richard:

Imagine

What a beautiful serene day to watch the clouds drift by.
I can imagine you spreading your wings
somewhere about so high.
I can imagine you helping others as you have done down here to enclose them in your wings and to shed them of their tears.
I can imagine you listening to every hurtful heart and thinking of ways to help them so they can make a new start.
I can imagine you watching me crying all the time and saying “Mom, don't cry for I'm doing more than fine”
The Lord made you an angel and that I know for sure your heart was made of gold, so very fine and pure.
Fly high my angel for I can see you everywhere.

IT IS A TIME FOR LOVE

By Margaret Gerner
BP/USA St. Louis, MO

February has fewer days than most months and that is may be of special significance to us, as our children had fewer days than most. When we think of this month, the most outstanding day, perhaps, is St. Valentine's Day. It is a time for love. When we were school aged, we had a special chance to give and receive cards in those decorated boxes in our primary classrooms. Perhaps it is the one holiday that children can really do something for everyone. Addressing a card to each and every classmate made you think of how you felt about each one and wonder about how they felt about you.

Love is found in every day of every year, but February and Valentine's Day is very special. I wish I could remember just how it felt to get a “nicer” Valentine from someone I had sent a “nicer” one to. It is so long ago, and there have been so many much more significant happenings in my life. But sometimes I'd like to remember just how it felt. I am sending along this Valentine Love Note to each of you right now and hope that you know it is one of the “nicer” ones. Because each of you is very special to me. Somehow I don't wonder how you feel; somehow I know.

As we grieve the loss of our children and one another's, we begin to find a different kind of love that we never expected to experience.

How long will the pain last? All the rest of your life, but the pain gets softer, much less intense. The thing to remember is that not only the pain will last, but the blessed memories as well. Tears are the proof of life.

The more love, the more tears. If this be true, then how could we ask, that the pain cease altogether. For then the memory of love would go away with it. The pain of GRIEF is the PRICE we pay for LOVE.

A Lesson In Grammar

By Mary Cleckley
BP/USA, Atlanta, GA

If you are like me...
I don't want anybody to quibble with me about whether my son's birthday is or was November 20 , because
(a) it is,
(b) it was, and
(c) it always will be

And, as to whether I have or had two children...Because
(a) I do
(b) I did, and
(c) I always will have

Abraham Lincoln: "With the fearful strain that is on me night and day, if I did not laugh,
I should die."

Following are his WORDS OF ENCOURAGEMENT:

"In this sad world of ours, sorrow comes to all
It comes with bitterest agony.....
Perfect relief is not possible, except with time.
You cannot realize that you will ever feel better.....
And yet this is a mistake.
You are sure to be happy again.
To know this, which is certainly true,
Will make you some less miserable now.
I have experienced enough to know what I say."

BOOK REVIEW Grief: Is This Normal

by Diana M. Cimador Roscigno - is a powerful and incredibly well written book. It presents the questions that all parents face when the tragedy of their children's death faces them. The book offers practical strategies to help parents understand and identify the emotional, physical, and spiritual changes that bereaved parents face in this journey. One of the most important aspects that the book makes readers recognize is that as painful as this is, you are not alone. The author does a great job of explaining that the feelings, emotions, and unanswered questions bereaved parents face are normal,..... and the author does a phenomenal job making this point crystal clear. The book is loaded with many tools and wonderful explanations of concepts that only a parent put in such a difficult position could ever explain. The author does this with grace, class, and tremendous integrity. Most importantly, Grief: Is This Normal truly helps parents verbalize the questions and the roller coaster of emotions that they have about the unknown. Grief: Is This Normal is an exceptional book for anyone looking for insight from a parent's perspective on the death of his or her child. I was moved by the content and highly impressed with the reader-friendly, warm, and intelligent writing style. I very highly recommend it as a must read book for bereaved parents and practitioners who work with these individuals.

A STIFF UPPER LIP CAUSES WRINKLES

By Mary Cleckley
BP/USA, Atlanta Georgia

The next time someone tells you to "keep a stiff upper lip" tell them I said it causes a wrinkle.

Bereaved parents will say that losing their child has "aged" them. I used to have a baby face. Into my late twenties, I still couldn't buy alcohol without showing my driver's license. When I married, I inherited two children from my husband's first marriage. I used to get a kick out of telling people I had teen-age children and waiting for the flabbergasted protestations to follow.

I was 33 when Nicholas died; I'm 36 as I write this. Lately, when I tell people I have a 20 year old daughter, no one bats an eyelash! Certainly no protestations – not even a
"My you must have started young!"
More like an "Oh, that's nice."
How old do I look anyway? What happened to me in those three years.

I have a theory: we don't get lines in our faces and gray in our hair and stress-related illnesses from the time we spend thinking about our child, crying and freely expressing our hurt, anger and guilt. We get them from the time we spend trying NOT to. Because we feel we cannot or should not break down before coworkers, acquaintances and, many times, even family, we keep that upper lip as stiff as possible and all of our emotions reined in as tightly as possible.
Kept up long enough, without any release, our faces take on that pinched look and the gut finally protests with a message of its own.

*We can't know why something's happen...But we can know that love and memories
outlast the pain of grief.
And we can know
that there's a place
inside the heart
where love lives always...
And where nothing beautiful can ever be forgotten.*

Our Credo

We are the parents whose children have died. We are the grandparents who have buried grandchildren. We are the siblings whose brothers and sisters no longer walk with us through life. We come together as Bereaved Parents of the USA to provide a haven where all bereaved families can meet and share our long and arduous grief journeys.

We attend monthly gatherings whenever we can and for as long as we believe necessary. We share our tears, confusion, anger, guilt, frustrations, emptiness, and feelings of hopelessness so that hope can be found anew. As we accept, support, comfort and encourage each other, we demonstrate to each other that survival is possible.

Together we celebrate the lives of our children, share the joys and triumphs as well as the love that will never fade. Together we learn how little it matters where we live, our color, our affluence, or what faith we uphold as we confront the tragedies of our children's deaths. Together, strengthened by the bonds we forge at our gatherings, we offer what we have learned to each other and to every more recently bereaved family.

We are the Bereaved Parents of the USA.
We Welcome You.

You can make your child/grandchild/sibling proud by volunteering to help others just like yourself. It is a way to help not only them but also to help yourself.

A BIG THANK YOU

to everyone who participated in the December Candle Light service, those in front and behind the scenes. It was a beautiful memorial, which honored all of our children. It's a huge task to put on the candle light service and everyone's efforts are truly appreciated. And THANK YOU to everyone who made love gift donations and for bringing refreshments for the potluck afterwards. The fellowship was great!
