SURVIVING SPECIAL DAYS

By Rabbi Earl Grollman

For you, the bereaved, there are significant events that are especially difficult: birthdays, anniversaries, Mother's Day, Father's Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas, Chanukah, New Year's Eve, Passover, Easter, Bar and Bat Mitzvahs, weddings and confirmations. You remember when they were such joyful, sharing spiritual times. Now they are days of wrenching memories, lost hopes and dreams. How to survive when you experience such anguish and feel so empty, depressed, abandoned, angry at life and even at God?

It is not a choice of pain or no pain, but how you manage the pain on this special day.

Planning ahead may lessen some of the despair. You need to feel less like a victim and more like a survivor. You may decide to do things differently; like changing old routines or starting new customs. Just don't escape into loneliness. Choose the right people to be with; those friends or relatives who allow you to share your innermost feelings. You should be allowed to mention your loved one's name, tell favorite stories, cry or laugh at past events.

Remember your loved one in a way that is meaningful to you. Light a memorial candle, peruse a photo album, watch home videos, write a letter or poem to your beloved, visit someone else who may be alone and suffering.

Especially you may need interludes of emotional and spiritual respite – a quiet walk, meditation, prayer. Perhaps, more than any other of lifecycle events, the death of a loved one raises the most profound issues about good and evil, reward and punishment and a concept of an afterlife.

You may find consolation and hope in meaningful rituals and the Holy Scriptures. Theology might aid in releasing those aching feelings of helplessness and guilt.

Painful losses often shake up spiritual beliefs. You may be surprised to find yourself furious at God for allowing this tragedy to occur. But great religious leaders in the Bible have asked the same question: "My God, why have you forsaken me?" The questioning of faith is a normal expression of loss and consistent with later spiritual growth.

As time goes along, you may eventually draw strength from your religious heritage. Faith may not immediately take away your heartache, but faith may help you ultimately to accept the unacceptable. Take consolation in knowing that other people have survived what you now feel. They often remark that the anticipation was frequently worse than the special day itself.

they don't all have wings, we call them

Chapter Library Book Reminder

Have you got a Bereaved Parent of the USA Library book at home? If you have finished reading it, please return it to our library so other bereaved parents can benefit from its words and wisdom. While there is no time limit for how long you can have a book — the longer you borrow a book, the less opportunities other bereaved parents have to read it. Because of our limited budget, it is normal to only have one copy of any one title, so its important to have the books returned promptly.

Contact Dave or Kathy Simone at (813) 653-1717 to return a book, arrange a donation or inquire about an available title. Or, visit the Sunday monthly meeting where the library is always set up at these meetings.

Telephone Friends

Need to talk? Call one of our Telephone Friends. They're here to lend a knowing ear because they've been there. Don't hesitate to call, we understand.

BP/USA 2006 Candle Light

Our annual Candle Lighting Remembrance Service and Ceremony was held Sunday, December 10, 2006, and it was lovingly shared by those of us who have a special bond. Many extended family and friends were in attendance to share in this event and give their support to us which is very important in our lives. This event was again celebrated for the tenth year along with the Worldwide Children's Candle Lighting.

The Steering Committee and I wish to thank all of those who gave of themselves to honor their children by helping us to make this Ceremony so beautiful. Thank you again to St. Joseph's Hospital and staff for all your help and cooperation.

We are working all year long on ways to make this special event even better than the year before! The committee starts actively working on it in September to be sure it is a perfect evening for you. I, Beverley Hurley, as chairperson, want to personally thank each one of the Tampa Bay Chapter Steering Committee members:

Linda Delk	Bill Schneider
Ron Ellington	Dave and Kathy Simone
Charles L'Homme	Sue Bowditch

We started our evening off with prelude music by Harpist Desiree Palmer. We wish to thank our speakers, Jackie and George Loadholtz and Jeanne O'Neil for sharing their stories. Our thanks to David Hurley and Jeff Patet for their devotion to our special readings. We also had the opportunity to enjoy the beautiful voice of Shawn Bell once again singing What Would You Be Today and The Rose.

Dave and Kathy Simone did another wonderful job of presenting our children's pictures in a beautifully loving and bitter sweet presentation. The majority of people attending participated in the picture presentation and I want to thank you for sharing your beautiful children with all of us.

A special thank you to Catherine Bowditch and Theresa Farmer for their time and effort to make our Boutique such a great success. Janell Gardner and Betty Thatcher donated beautiful birthstone angels to the boutique. Thank you again ladies!

Thanks to Tommy and Barbara Dietrich, Ben Bowditch, Catherine Bowditch, Theresa Farmer, Kim Gonzalez and Chris Williams for their hard work setting up, during the ceremony, reception and clean up! A special thank you to Jeanne O'Neil for letting us use her beautiful poinsettias as part of our decorations!

As always we appreciate all of the parents who made monetary donations, brought items for the boutique, and dishes to share to complete the evening with a wonderful reception and fellowship.

SINCERE THANKS GO OUT TO ALL OF YOU FOR MAKING THIS CEREMONY
SO BEAUTIFUL AND MEANINGFUL IN REMEMBRANCE OF
ALL OF OUR CHILDREN!

The Impact Of Grief In Special Parenting Situations

National SIDS Resource Center (NSRC)

The tragedy of a child's death brings profound pain to all affected, and it presents incredibly difficult and unusual problems for grieving parents. For some parents, the effects of such a complicated and devastating tragedy can be further compounded when the death occurs in what are already trying family situations. There are some parents for whom there is no established "circle of concern"; there are some parents for whom there is no safety net; there are some parenting situations that are outside the domain of the typical support network; and there are some parents who choose to reject this network for their own reasons.

A child's death may present unique dilemmas for:

- Single parents who are often self-supporting and may be more isolated and ignored
- Unmarried parents who may already have experienced the disfavor of family and others
- Teenage parents whose grief is often not validated because of their situation or their youth
- Parents in stressful financial situations whose struggle to satisfy their most basic needs may cause them to stifle or ignore their need to grieve and for whom loss is a constantly repeated theme
- Divorced parents and parents in blended or nontraditional families who may require unique responses or resources
- Step-parents whose grief may not be understood or appreciated
- Adoptive parents who may be expected to grieve less than birth parents because their "bond" with the child is perceived to be less intense and Foster parents who are not thought to have the same "right" to grieve as birth parents
- Parents who experience the death of the only child they may ever have and who also grieve for the loss of their parenting role
- Parents losing a child who is one in a multiple birth and who are faced with the double task of saying "goodbye to the baby who has died and yet...still loving and caring for the baby who is living" (Hosford 1994, 1)
- Parents who are removed or estranged from typical and traditional support systems
- Parents whose language, cultural traditions, and/or beliefs are largely unrecognized or misunderstood by the society
- Parents in homeless shelters, prisons, jails, or other institutions whose needs require unique consideration and creative responses
- Parents with substance abuse problems whose child may have faced medical and/or developmental problems and who often must deal with guilt and other complex and overwhelming problems when a child dies

All of the grieving parents identified above as well as parents in many other situations may find their grief unusually complicated. They may discover the responses of others to be less concerned and may find support networks less readily available. These parents may not receive the same validation as parents in traditional nuclear families, and the needs and wishes of parents in these unique and complex situations may sometimes be ignored or misunderstood. Parental experiences, coping strategies, and cultural differences vary widely. At the same time, these parents may not have the same access to, need for, or reliance on peer or other support groups. Obtaining transportation or babysitters so they can attend meetings may be an impossibility for some parents. Still others may reject such support networks and depend solely on family, neighborhood, or church networks as the best support system for them. Parental bereavement support groups are not for everyone.

All of the parents exemplified here find themselves in special situations affecting their personal grief experience, how others react to their grief, and the type of support and/or intervention needed to help them resolve their grief. However, these parents are the fathers and mothers of the child who died; they are the ones who have nurtured, cared for, and loved that child. The sense of absolute emptiness, the lack of wholeness, and the feeling of diminishment after the death of a child are felt by all parents, regardless of marital status; age; language; financial or social circumstances; biological relation to the child; or cultural, racial, or religious background. Despite the differences among these groups in their responses and needs, all have one major need in common—their grief is intense and must be acknowledged.

Happy 22nd Birthday!

I'm Free

By Linda Jo Jackson

Don't grieve for me, for now I'm free.
I'm following that path God had for me.
I took His hand when I heard Him call.
I turned my back and left it all.

I could not stay another day.
To laugh, to love, to work or play.
Tasks left undone must stay that way.
I found that place at the close of the day.

If my parting has left a void,
Then fill it with remembered joy.
A friendship shared, a laugh, a kiss,
Ah yes, these things I too, will miss.

Be not burdened with times of sorrow.
I wish you the sunshine of tomorrow.
My life's been full, I savored much.
Good friends, good times a loved one's touch.

Perhaps my time seemed all too brief,
Don't lengthen it now with undue grief.
Lift up your heart and share with me,
God wanted me now, He set me free.

*I miss you and love you with all my heart
more each day,
Love, Mom*

Our Credo

We are the parents whose children have died. We are the grandparents who have buried grandchildren. We are the siblings whose brothers and sisters no longer walk with us through life. We come together as Bereaved Parents of the USA to provide a haven where all bereaved families can meet and share our long and arduous grief journeys.

We attend monthly gatherings whenever we can and for as long as we believe necessary. We share our tears, confusion, anger, guilt, frustrations, emptiness, and feelings of hopelessness so that hope can be found anew. As we accept, support, comfort and encourage each other, we demonstrate to each other that survival is possible.

Together we celebrate the lives of our children, share the joys and triumphs as well as the love that will never fade. Together we learn how little it matters where we live, our color, our affluence, or what faith we uphold as we confront the tragedies of our children's deaths. Together, strengthened by the bonds we forge at our gatherings, we offer what we have learned to each other and to every more recently bereaved family.

We are the Bereaved Parents of the USA.
We Welcome You.
