MOTHER'S DAY AND FATHER'S DAY

By Kay Bevington

This time of year is a bittersweet time for bereaved parents. Many are grateful for their surviving children and, at the same time, mourn for and wonder what it would be like if their deceased child had lived. It is difficult to be joyful when part of us is saddened due to the death of a child. This is especially difficult for bereaved parents whose only child or all children have died. Am I really a mother or father now? It is especially appreciated by these parents to be remembered at this time of year by friends and family members.

Grandparents hurt for themselves and also for their bereaved children. Many wonder what role to play when this time of year rolls around once again. Bereaved parents wonder how to handle the celebrations. Do I attend these functions to honor my parents while I'm mourning my child? Do I make a spectacle of myself if I become unraveled during these ceremonies? Should I attend the gatherings or simply avoid them to save my sanity? I do not wish to hurt my parents' feelings and how long will they be alive to honor them?

There are no easy answers to these problems. Each individual must decide what he/she can handle and that decision will have to be made on a yearly basis. What is helpful for one might be detrimental for another. Time may help to ease the pain and alter the decisions that are made. An honest discussion about the situation with those involved will help to ease hurt feelings. Try to plan other times with grandparents and let them know you love them even though you may not be able to celebrate these special days. Wherever you are in your grief, may you know that many of us are journeying with you along this difficult path.

Kay Bevington will be doing workshops at the Gathering for those who have lost an only child or all children.

Wanted: Gathering Sponsorship Donors

We still have several bereaved people who are very much in need of attending the Gathering to help them with their grief but are having financial difficulties.

If we have omitted your child, misspelled your child's name, or listed incorrect dates, please accept our apologies and call Beverley Hurley at (813) 832-3175 to correct the information. Call any of our telephone friends if you are having a hard time on these days. We truly understand your pain; for we, too, remember our own children.

We understand how difficult it is to attend your first meeting. Feelings can be overwhelming; we have all experienced them and know how important it is to take the first step. Our stories may be different, but we are alike in that we all hurt deeply. We can not take your pain away, but we can offer friendship and support. Bring a friend or relative to lean on if you wish! We need not grieve alone! See you next month!

HAPPILY EVER AFTER

By Erma Bombeck

If you're looking for an answer this Mother's Day on why God reclaimed your child, I don't know. I only know that thousands of mothers out there today desperately need an answer as to why they were permitted to go through the elation of carrying a child and then lose it to miscarriage, accident, violence, disease or drugs.

Motherhood isn't just a series of contractions; it's a state of mind, from the moment we know life is inside us, we feel a responsibility to protect and defend that human being. It's a promise we can't keep. We beat ourselves to death over that pledge. "If I hadn't worked through the eighth month." "If I had taken him to the doctor when he had a fever." "If I hadn't let him use the car that night." "If I hadn't been so naïve, I'd have noticed he was on drugs."

The longer I live the more convinced I become that surviving changes us. After the bitterness, the anger, the guilt and the despair are tempered by time, we look at life differently. While I was writing my book, I WANT TO GROW HAIR. I WANT TO GROW UP. I WANT TO GO TO BOISE, I talked with mothers who had lost a child to cancer. Every single one said that death gave their lives new meaning and purpose. And who do you think prepared them for the rough, lonely road they had to travel? Their dying child. They pointed their mothers toward the future and told them to keep going. The children had already accepted what their mothers were fighting to reject.

The children in the bombed out nursery in Oklahoma City have touched more lives than they will ever know. Workers who had probably given their kids a mechanical pat on the head without thinking that morning were making calls home during the day to their children to say, "I love you."

This may seem like a strange Mother's Day column on a day when joy and life abound for the millions of mothers throughout the country but it's also a day of appreciation and respect. I can think of no mothers who deserve it more than those who had to give a child back. In the face of adversity, we are not permitted to ask, "Why me?" You can ask, but you won't get an answer. Maybe you are the instrument that is left behind to perpetuate the life that was lost and appreciate the time you had with it.

The late Gilda Radner summed it up pretty well. "I wanted a perfect ending. Now I've learned the hard way that some poems don't rhyme and some stories don't have a clear beginning, middle and end. Life is about not knowing, having to change, taking the moment and making the best of it, without knowing what is going to happen next. Delicious ambiguity."

A Mother is Forever

By Shirley Ottman
BP/USA North Texas Chapter
From The Slender Thread

*This Mother's Day will trouble you -
It can't be otherwise
Since your son and daughter, too,
Won't be there by your side.*

*They won't be there to bake a cake
Or bring you cards and flowers,
Nor can they walk into your home
To brighten lonely hours.*

*The memories you have of them
I know will make you smile,
And you'll remember all the joys
that made your lives worthwhile.*

*And so on Mother's Day this year
And in every other,
Remember they're connected still
By love to you, their mother.*

Now I Understand

Memorial Day never had any special meaning to me until our son, Steve, died. In fact, I remember thinking, "What a waste of money and how morbid to put flowers on a grave after someone had been dead for months or years."

Our son's ashes are buried in the mountains of North Idaho where he loved to camp, hunt and fish—it's a five hour round trip by car from our home. So we can't visit there often. Now I wish his grave was closer.

So, on the Memorial Days since he died, I've found comfort in visiting or taking flowers to a living family member or friend. Or simply placing a flower on a grave in a nearby cemetery.

Now I understand why Memorial Day is a special day.

Through A Mother's Eyes

Barbara Klich
BFO / Toronto

The most unimaginable words that can ever be said to a mother are -- 'Your child has died'.

Whether the words come from a doctor who has treated the child through a long and painful illness, from a policeman who announces that an accident has claimed another life, or from a relative who utters the terrible news, the words pierce through the heart.

Many mothers say that with the death of a child, they suffered an amputation of the heart - a part of them was gone. Many explain that the mind wants to comprehend what has happened, but there is a part of the brain and the soul that simply cannot accept this terrible fact of life which is death.

There is tremendous confusion and there is still that expectation that the child will walk through the front door, spend hours on the telephone, raid the refrigerator, and do all of the things that were a part of that young life. There is anger that this has happened to one so young, one with such potential. It seems that all of the hopes and dreams for tomorrow have suddenly been shattered and there is a great sense of depression that is entrenched in every hour - waking and sleeping.

There is guilt ... mothers often feel they are responsible for the child in every way and death is a bitter pronouncement that they have failed in not being able to save the child. Mothers say that death is so powerful there is loss, not just for the future, but of the present when the child should be happy and a part of family life. The memory of the past must be embraced and protected and this too can be very difficult.

Many mothers find they need to talk to others who have been down that lonely path and learn how they have coped and met this grief head on.

It isn't easy trying to talk to the rest of the world.

Neighbours, friends, acquaintances, business associates, and even relatives are reluctant to mention the child's name, afraid that this could unleash a rush of tears that would be difficult to stem.

Women grieve differently from men and this can become a source of irritation in some marriages. Cultural differences can make it very difficult in families if one parent has customs that differ from another. Personalities are at odds and one parent may find that talking helps while another may feel that there must be time for silence.

While many people want to help the bereaved, sometimes the words are inappropriate. It may be that an arm around the shoulder and a quiet word will be much better received than platitudes or suggestions that one knows how a mother feels -- unless one has been through the loss of a child, those words can be devastating.

Healing has its own timetable and it cannot be bent, stapled, or forced ... it may come though with the help of others and certainly through Bereaved Families of Ontario, Metropolitan Toronto, it can happen. By meeting with other mothers who have heard those terrible words, 'your child has died', the struggle can be lessened. Eventually, with help, there can be a time when a quiet sweetness and joy will return to life.

Living with a child's death is not easy work and for a mother it is a time to remember.

Where Are All The Butterflies

By Shirley Ottman
BP/USA of North Texas

Grief's landscape is a barren place, as lonely as a salt flat, starkly bleak and treeless beneath the cloudless panoply of heaven.

*Where might we then find hope
if not one solitary bloom's in sight?*

And where may we find faith if no auspicious rainbows span the sky?

*And where may we find joy
in such a sterile place?*

*And where may we find peace
when tears provide the sole precipitation there?*

And where are all the butterflies which from their silken tombs emerge in beauty?

Where is my butterfly?

Where are all the butterflies?

My Beloved Son Brian:

We learned you were terminal,
 At least that's what the doctor would say;
 But Jesus has control
 So we would pray and pray.

We never lost our faith,
 Slowly you were being healed,
 With Christian help from Delilah,
 My eyes on Jesus were peeled.

I experience so many "wish I had's" or "what if's",
 I never treated you like there'd be no tomorrow,
 Now I wish I had treated you like a King,
 As I deal each day with my sorrow.

So much was left for you to see and do – you were only 39;
 If only I had the power to turn back time.
 But would I really want you back –
 In a world Satan is trying to rule?
 When I know you're kneeling at God's throne,
 Perhaps using you as His Devine tool.

Written by your mama, Diana Reams

Dear Brian,

Your brother, Reid, and I miss you so much.
 Reid chose a photo of you that he tattooed on his arm and it is so life-

Fallen But Never Forgotten

Memorial Day
May 28, 2007

Our Credo

We are the parents whose children have died. We are the grandparents who have buried grandchildren. We are the siblings whose brothers and sisters no longer walk with us through life. We come together as Bereaved Parents of the USA to provide a haven where all bereaved families can meet and share our long and arduous grief journeys.

We attend monthly gatherings whenever we can and for as long as we believe necessary. We share our tears, confusion, anger, guilt, frustrations, emptiness, and feelings of hopelessness so that hope can be found anew. As we accept, support, comfort and encourage each other, we demonstrate to each other that survival is possible.

Together we celebrate the lives of our children, share the joys and triumphs as well as the love that will never fade. Together we learn how little it matters where we live, our color, our affluence, or what faith we uphold as we confront the tragedies of our children's deaths. Together, strengthened by the bonds we forge at our gatherings, we offer what we have learned to each other and to every more recently bereaved family.

We are the Bereaved Parents of the USA.
We Welcome You.

THE FOUR T'S

The first part of grief is anger and the pain.....it's like someone has kicked you in the gut and you can't draw a breath. It's horrible but you can make it through this.

In our bereaved parents group there is a saying, it takes Four T's to help make it through:

Tears.....lord knows you will cry a bushel.

Talk.....you have to talk about your pain, your child and what is going on with you.

Time.....time doesn't heal it but it helps get you to where you can deal with it.

Touch.....having someone hold your hand or hug you while you are talking or crying, helps so much.
