"With Hope"

This is not at all how
We thought it was supposed to be
We had so many plans for you
We had so many dreams
And now you are gone away
And left us with the memories of your smile
And nothing we can say
And nothing we can do
Can take away the pain
The pain of losing you, but...
We can cry with hope
We can say goodbye with hope
'Cause we know our goodbye is not the end, oh no
And we can grieve with hope
'Cause we believe with hope
(There's a place by God's grace)
There's a place where we'll see your face again
We'll see your face again..
And never have I known
Anything so hard to understand
And never have I questioned more
The wisdom of God's plan
But through the cloud of tears
I see the Father's smile and say well done
And I imagine you
Where you wanted most to be
Seeing all your dreams come true
'Cause now you're home
And now you're free, and...
We have this hope as an anchor
'Cause we believe that everything
God promised us is true, so...
We wait with hope
We ache with hope
We hold on with hope
We let go with hope

Lyrics from the song "With Hope"
by Steven Curtis Chapman on his new CD

Love Gifts-A Thoughtful Way to Remember

Love Gifts are a beautiful and loving way to remember a loved one. Through Love Gifts, we are able to reach out to others with our brochures and newsletters as well as obtain books and other information for our library. We truly appreciate every Love Gift, donation and sponsorship. Our Chapter work is done by volunteers and these donations help us reach out in many ways, including the preparation and mailing of the newsletter.

A Special Way To Remember Your Child: Sponsor A Newsletter Page

Anyone can sponsor a page in this newsletter in memory of their child. The price for a full page is $60 which includes one black and white scan of one color or black and white photograph and your tribute to your child, which can include poems, stories or whatever you like. Your contribution supports the chapter and helps pay for the printing of the newsletter.

The newsletter page will also be posted on our new and improved website for one year on the Our Children page!

To sponsor a newsletter page, contact Beverley Hurley at (813) 832-3175 (email bee.hurley@gte.net). Please note that sponsorship pages are due by the 15th of the month BEFORE the publication month.

Chapter Library Books

If you have finished reading a BP/USA Library book, please, please return it to our library. There is no time limit for how long you can have a book, but the longer you borrow a book, the less opportunities other bereaved parents have to read it. We also gladly accept book donations.

Contact Tommy or Barbara Dietrich at (813) 234-4705 or visit one of our three monthly sharing meetings to return a book, arrange a donation or inquire about an available title.

Electronic Newsletter

The Newsletter is available electronically. To receive it by Email, send your name and email address to: bee.hurley@gte.net and indicate your desire to switch from regular "snail" mail to email. Email recipients will also receive additional news and information, while helping our chapter save costs. We very much appreciate your cooperation by helping us out this way!

Please note—Every meeting can't speak to everyone's needs, so we do try to offer a variety of topics. We do offer strength, understanding and hope.

We need not grieve alone!

Our Children . . . Remembered

So long as we live, they too shall live ... For they are a part of us as we remember them.

The Circle of Love Center for Grieving Children

LifePath Hospice and Palliative Care's Circle of Love Center for Grieving Children is a safe, loving place where families can help each other. The Center provides caring support in a safe environment where children, teens and their families grieving a significant death can share their experiences as they move through the healing and grieving process. We provide ongoing grief support groups for children, ages to 18, and their parents or caregivers.

Dear Friend,

Please don't question my grief..

If I do not call, it's because I am not ready.

If I hold on too tightly, it's because I am afraid to let go.

If I talk too much, it's because I need to know everything will be o.k.

If I don't want to talk, it's because at the moment, I don't want to remember.

If I cry too much, it's because my pain is overflowing.

If I laugh too much, it does not mean I have not lost.

If I am too sensitive, it's because the wound is raw.

If I snap, it's because I am angry at ... I don't know who to be angry at.

If I am self-involved, it's because I am nursing my wounds.

If I seem not to hurt, it's because I am afraid my pain may overwhelm me and you.

If I seem not to care, it's because I am afraid to lose and hurt again.

If it seems to you that I grieve too long or too deeply ... It's because you have not known my loss.

By Kathleen Kornbrust

God's Angel of Love

I remember the day Kelli was born, so much joy and happiness. Her mother and dad had tried so long to have a child, and now she was here.

As she began to grow older, we all saw the great love she had in her heart. She loved the fragrant smell of a rose, the birds in the sky and all animals around her, but most of all she loved every person she came in contact with and everyone loved her so very much. Kelli showed us all, by her life how to love. The most important thing she showed us all was how to love one another.

We say in our human minds, "God she is only eight years old, such a short time we have had with her", but in God's mind it may be a very long time for there is so much hate in this world today that God needs his Angel of Love to show the world how to love and how to love one another.

Anniversaries

by Elaine E. Stillwell

When we have lost someone special in our lives, we know how much anguish we experience as the death anniversary approaches. It seems every single cell of our bodies remember. Even if we want to forget the day and the pain associated with it, our bodies won't let us. Some people say it's a day to stay in bed and pull the covers up over our heads. But others, like me, feel it is a day to do something special to remember my special persons, in my case, my nineteen-year-old daughter, Peggy, and my twenty-one-year-old son, Denis, who died four days apart from the same car accident.

It has been thirteen years for me without my beautiful Peggy and my first-born, Denis. Thirteen years without their smiles, hugs, jokes, teasing, laughter, gossip, tenderness, music, voices, chatter, noise and endearing mannerisms. At each anniversary, my husband and I have always chosen to do something they would have enjoyed or perhaps would have wished us to do.

It could be shopping 'til I drop, which was Peggy's specialty; eating Rocky Road ice cream, a favorite of hers; baking chocolate chip cookies, for which she was famous; having a barbecue with friends, of which she had many. It could be attending a concert, which Denis loved; walking along the beach or having a picnic dinner where Denis was a lifeguard; renting a movie that I know he would have loved; making French toast, his all-time favorite waker-upper; playing with our dog, whom he would have gone wild over, since he always wanted a pedigreed black lab of his own.

Attending local street festivals, going swimming, watching tennis matches, having a beer, enjoying a lobster fest, playing favorite cassette tapes of theirs, installing a garage-door opener (which they would have loved), eating in an oceanfront haunt of theirs, having special masses in their honor and inviting close friends and relatives to attend, reminiscing together, planting flowers and shrubs in their memory, sharing their story with others, praying to them, lighting candles for them, writing an article in their honor - all these things keep them close to my heart and make their anniversary days special.

Tears can fall, and that's okay, because tears bring a sense of release and healing. The funny thing is, the tears are a mixture of happiness and sadness that we can't really separate, a combination of tears of joy for having memories to touch our hearts, and tears of sorrow wishing they were here with us, holding our hands and saying all those things we want to hear repeated.

Anniversaries are a time to share with others our special love for the people we miss. I call it, "Sharing Peggy and Denis with the world." It keeps their memories alive in others, and it makes my heart feel so much better.

Plan ahead. Include dear friends. Surround yourself with loving people who make you feel comfortable and cared about. Share your memories. Tell those funny stories. Don't be afraid of tears. Give a toast to your special person. Release some balloons. Do what is good for your heart

From Bereavement Magazine July/August 1999

Grief

"I pray that our Heavenly Father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom." - Abraham Lincoln

William P. Macaux, M.S.

Society's stereotype of the role of the bereaved male does little to foster a realistic understanding of his vulnerability to loss and his needs for emotional support.

From boyhood on, men are socialized to believe that they must be "strong" and that their passive feelings (such as fear and hurt) must be suppressed while more active feelings, like anger, are okay. Therefore, men often do not learn to differentiate and name their feelings as women usually do.

Male strength is measured in terms of the ability to be independent and in control. Seeking help is often considered a confession of weakness.

William Schatz, co-founder of the Seattle chapter of The Compassionate Friends, has labeled some aspects of the man's role that he believes especially inhibit the grieving process:

"Macho Man" implies control over the expression of emotion in order to maintain a public image of strength and control.

"Competitor" implies a high value on winning and not being a loser.

"Protector" implies shielding loved ones from harm.

"Problem Solver" implies a can-do attitude, an ability to fix things and actively resolve problems.

"Controller" implies effective regulation of activities and environmental factors in family life.

"Self-Sufficient" implies independence, an ability to stand alone.

To the extent that a man identifies with these characteristics, he is likely to have difficulty expressing the full range of his thoughts and feelings. As he is overtaken by the powerful and unexpected emotions of grief, he may feel frightened by his loss of control. He is likely to feel impotent as he sees his loved ones suffering with a problem he can't fix.

Finding it difficult to seek and accept help, he may tend to cope by keeping busy, intellectualizing his grief, and by angrily placing blame -- in short, by denial of the loss and his feelings associated with it.

An important factor for bereaved fathers is the common assumption in our culture that the male role is that of a secondary attachment figure; a view that is no doubt reinforced by the fact that women have traditionally been the primary caretakers of children. As a consequence, bereaved fathers are frequently perceived as having lost less than bereaved mothers have.

Though they often receive supportive gestures and messages during the funeral and in their very early grief, support for grieving men usually lessens as time passes. But for many bereaved men, emotional reactions do not appear immediately. Some men have found that as they returned to work, associates avoided them, failed to acknowledge their loss, and/or expected them to resume normal function almost immediately.

In some cases these responses carried over into friendships as well, and bereaved fathers found the painful, social situation worsened when they were asked, "How's your wife?"

What is it about this apparently benign, even considerate, question that feels so hurtful? If it is not preceded by a caring and attentive inquiry into the father's feelings as well, it may be perceived as a negation of the father's loss and his needs for support. This can only intensify his feelings of isolation, and impose on him the role of protector at a time when he is all too painfully aware of his own emotional vulnerability.

He may take the question, "How is your wife," as a cue to stay within a narrowly prescribed range of traditional masculine behaviors. He is likely to refrain from expressing his feelings or discovering the fuller impact of his own loss. Many grief therapists regard these tasks as basic to the grieving process.

He may also feel that the question implies a privileged position for wives and mothers, in turn arousing feelings of resentment. Given the neglect he is already experiencing in many of his interactions with others, the addition of this inequity may only deepen his hurt, excite his anger and even encourage him to blame his wife for his feelings of hurt and neglect.

What, then, would bereaved men find universally helpful in the responses of others? A caring and steadfast listener is most helpful. This could be a person who simply admits his or her helplessness to restore what has been lost or to remove the pain. The characteristics that have been consistently reported as most helpful are:

The mere presence of someone who is patient and caring.

Someone who is reliably there over time.

Someone who respects the need of the bereaved to search the experience and explore feelings without judgment or criticism.

Many men have described their surprise and deep appreciation at encountering strangers who quickly became very helpful and available friends. Others have observed that though most people want to help, they often don't know how.

In order to let others know that grief is not a taboo subject, bereaved men, especially, should try to initiate discussion about their loss and their feelings. This is not always easy (especially for the newly bereaved), but it is generally agreed that when bereaved men take the risk and initiate this effort, it usually evokes a positive response from others.

The primary difference in the bereavement experience of men and women seems to be associated with social responses and their gender-specific roles. Grieving men and women both have strong feelings of hurt, urgent needs to be unconditionally accepted in their pain, and a desire to be heard.

While it may not be possible to immediately and fully eliminate the feelings of isolation, it should be reassuring to know that such changes are not unusual and they need not be permanent.

It is particularly important for each individual to feel understood and respected by others. Much conflict can be averted, and greater sensitivity is possible, when needs and limitations are understood. An important part of this overall understanding is that men have needs and limits too.

Happy Birthday Mini-Me!

I wonder what we would be doing today. Would we be playing Hide and Seek in the closets, chasing Butterflies by the lake or playing dress up with your siblings?

Just to spend a moment with you, it would not matter. You would be 8 years old and on the day of your birth, GOD gave you to me and what an amazing miracle, with those enormous brown eyes that could see through to the heart of mankind.

We will always be grateful, simply because you lived and each day, we think of the joy that you brought to us. We miss you, we love you and your light will shine in our hearts forever. Have a beautiful birthday in Heaven!

We love you always!

ATTENTION—IMPORTANT MESSAGE

We are now preparing to purchase the bricks to be placed around the Angel of Hope in the new Riverside Park in Temple Terrace along the beautiful Hillsborough River!

If you want to be one of the first bricks placed and part of the original dedication of this Beautiful Memorial Garden, in memory of our children gone but never forgotten, and have not ordered your brick yet, please return this Order Form ASAP to order your brick.

(Bricks also make wonderful gifts to family members and friends in memory of their loved ones!)

Our Credo

We are the parents whose children have died. We are the grandparents who have buried grandchildren. We are the siblings whose brothers and sisters no longer walk with us through life. We come together as Bereaved Parents of the USA to provide a haven where all bereaved families can meet and share our long and arduous grief journeys.

We attend monthly gatherings whenever we can and for as long as we believe necessary. We share our tears, confusion, anger, guilt, frustrations, emptiness, and feelings of hopelessness so that hope can be found anew. As we accept, support, comfort and encourage each other, we demonstrate to each other that survival is possible.

Together we celebrate the lives of our children, share the joys and triumphs as well as the love that will never fade. Together we learn how little it matters where we live, our color, our affluence, or what faith we uphold as we confront the tragedies of our children's deaths. Together, strengthened by the bonds we forge at our gatherings, we offer what we have learned to each other and to every more recently bereaved family.

We are the Bereaved Parents of the USA.
We Welcome You.

“Compassion is sometimes the fatal capacity for feeling what it is like to live inside somebody else's skin.

It is the knowledge that there can never really be any peace and joy for me until there is peace and joy finally for you too.”

—Frederick Buechner (b. 1926), educator, writer, theologian

Pinky~Swear by Persis Oberreither bares the pain the parents of Amy faced in reaching the decision to disconnect the machines that were substituting for life in their only child. Even at the tender age of 18 they had already had conversations regarding end of life issues. Amy witnessed the helplessness of others and not only had a living will but had entered into an agreement with her mother through the custom of locking pinkies and swearing to each other they would do their best to fulfill each other's wishes.

I first met Persis in 2003 in St. Louis. When she was relating her story I was overwhelmed by the intensity of her gaze. I sensed that the pain coming through her eyes came straight from her heart. This book shares that pain in a way that it can be understood by all who read it. It will be particularly comforting to others that have shared this experience and help others who may be facing such a decision to understand that they are really not crazy.

Persis and Jeff are heroes to me and I am certain that if Amy were here she would echo that sentiment.
